is a light saying which enshrines a deep meaning. When the Cantonese, after years of hard labour in a foreign land, has succeeded in amassing two or three hundred dollars, he comes home and begins to trade as an independent merchant with a capital of his own. Fortune follows the exercise of such industry and economy. Of the Japanese merchant a different story must be told, and until he changes radically the Chinaman will go ahead of him. He need not become as cunning or as avaricious as the Cantonese, but at least he should be an acquiring and exercising the qualities of the man of Foochow."

RECOLLECTIONS OF LIFE IN CHINA IN THE FIFTIES.

III.

In the spring of 1857, I, with several friends, left Hongkong for Shanghai, via Foochow, in the small coasting steamer Antelope. No noteworthy incident occurred until after leaving Foochow, when, as we were enjoying our afternoon coffee and cigars, and by chance discussing the question of "thirteen sitting down," a violent thump and tremulous motion of the vessel announced the unpleasant fact that we had struck upon something. We rushed on deck and found the steamer hard and fast on a reef near Matsui Island. Fortunately the day was fine and there was no sea on.

Our captain, who was a well-known character on the coast, whatever he may have been as a navigator, assured us that the tide was low, and that when it rose we should soon float off. We waited patiently for the happy termination of our troubles, but the afternoon wore on, and the tide, instead of rising, continued to fall; as it did so, the steamer careened more and more until she reached an angle at which there was serious danger of her slipping off suddenly and filling with water. Then spars were got out to shore her up, the water was pumped from her tanks, and what cargo she had, consisting of several hundred slabs of tin, was thrown overboard. Still the tide continued to recede, night came on, and what added to the peril of our situation was the fact that all along that part the pirates were rampant, and we might expect to be attacked by them at any moment. Our steamer was well armed, as were all foreign vessels trading on the coast at that time, and carried a 32-pound gun, but, situated as we were, it was, of course, quite impossible to use it. All the small arms, however, were brought into requisition, and throughout the night we sat in a most uncomfortable position with our guns ready for use at a moment's notice. We had frequent alarms, as a number of native craft came near us, but, doubtless, presuming we were simply at anchor, did not molest us. Our captain quite lost his head, and swore he would blow his brains out if he failed to get the vessel off. The first officer, however, fortunately was cool and collected, and it was by his efforts that the necessary steps were taken for protecting the steamer and ultimately getting her out of the perilous position she was in. At a later date Colonel Ward, the commander of the Ever Victorious Chinese army, was pointed out to me, and I was certain that in him I recognised the quondam first officer of the Antelope, who had shown so much self-possession on this occasion. Soon after day-break, the water being then high, an anchor was run out, with much difficulty, and when it had almost given, the vessel glided off the rocks and once more floated on an even keel. We then described some boats full of men starting off from the shore, and our captain, who had recovered his courage and ordered the 32 pounder gun to be loaded, and sent two or three shells among them, which soon turned them back; but, as the steamer was not leaking, and having steam up, was now again under control and ready to resume her voyage, this appeared to me to be a most uncalculated and cowardly proceeding, and the more so as we had no reason to suppose their intentions towards us were of a hostile nature. However, such eccentricities on the part of captains navigating these waters were not uncommon in those days. After this all went smoothly until we were in the Yangtze-Kiang, going up thither, with a fair tide and at full speed. We were sitting at table in the evening and having a game of whist with the captain, expecting to be at Woosung in another hour, when the anchor was let go, and the captain left us, quietly going on deck and saying he would be back in a moment. We accordingly remained seated, looking over the quay as he had just been doing, but as we had no reason to suppose that he would not return, we were not alarmed. Until it appeared the captain was keeping us an unreasonable time, when we also went on deck to find out what had become of him. The night was dark and cold, and the vessel lying at anchor, the only sound to be heard being the gurgling of the water as the swift current swept by. We searched in vain for our crafty skipper, who was nowhere to be found; but as we were returning shivering to our warm quarters below, the steward, in response to our enquiries, informed us with a cunning leer that he had left in his boat and gone up to Shanghai. We then realised that we had been nicely tricked, and were in the unfortunate predicament in which passengers often found themselves in those days who travelled by private steamers. The captain had carried with him all the necessary provisions, and we were to be kept on board in duration until his consignees had time to operate and make the most of it. All the next day, and the next after that we spent on board the steamer in the muddy and cheerless waters of the river, we tried in vain to get a Chinese boat to take us off, but it was of no avail, for whenever one showed a disposition to come alongside, a warning voice from the steamer caused her to sheer off. At last when our patience was nearly exhausted, and after two days' delay, the steamer got under way again and soon we were in Shanghai, when profuse apologies were made for the detention to which we had been subjected, with the usual "you know how it was," &c., with which we had to be content, resolving however never again to be caught in a similar trap. I can only say that, as W. S. Wetmore, in the N. C. Daily News.

THE CROWN AGENTS FOR THE COLONIES.

The question which has again been brought to the front at Hongkong as to the relations of the Crown Agents with the colony is, says the L. & C. Express, one of some delicacy, but as it very closely concerns the material progress of Hongkong it is perfectly legitimate to discuss it. There is no doubt that the views expressed by Mr. A. P. MacEwen at the recent meeting of the Legislative Council are largely shared by many others in the colony. Mr. MacEwen is of opinion that it would be of very great advantage to the trade of the colony if all the requirements for public works were put up to public tender without the intervention of the Crown Agents; but he goes farther, and says that he conscientiously believes that thousands of dollars would have been saved in connection with the Tiam Tat works and the forts if this plan had been adopted. Sir William de Vaux, as was natural, was careful not to express an opinion one way or the other, but, although he intimated that he had little hope that any change would be made, he added significantly, "We never know what unanimity of public opinion may effect." Judging by the discussion which took place subsequently at the meeting of the Finance Committee, hon. members are not very clear themselves as to the status and functions of the department of the Crown Agents for the Colonies. This is, perhaps, not to be wondered at, seeing that the working of this remarkable institution has all along been shrouded in official obscurity. The attempts which have been made to gain a little light on the subject by means of questions addressed in Parliament have been practically barren of result, and all we are told is that the Crown Agents stand in the position of a private firm, into whose business Parliament has no right to inquire. In a Parliamentary paper, which we have before us, we find a tolerably explicit statement by Sir P. Julian, as to the functions of the Crown Agents. In the earlier stages of colonial history, when the Governors appointed by the Crown had almost absolute authority over the territories entrusted to them, except in matters of the greatest moment, in which questions of Imperial policy were involved, were comparatively independent of the home authorities, each Governor had his own agent or representative in London, who generally acted as an intermediary between himself and the Crown, besides performing the miscellaneous services required of him in the interests both of the colony and of the Governor himself, whose immediate servant he was. Prior to the year 1833 the salaries of all these Agents appear to have been paid from the Colonial funds. The way in which they transacted the business of the different colonies, however, gave rise to grave complaints, and the Treasury resolved on the consolidation of the business into one establishment, presided over by two gentlemen who had retired from the Colonial Office. The concentration of the whole business in the hands of two superannuated officials did not render the new agency more competent than those it had superseded to perform the requisite duties to the satisfaction of the Colonies concerned. It soon became evident that the agency must be either completely reorganised or altogether abolished. In 1858 it was reconstituted on the basis which exists at the present time. According to the Colonial Office, view the Colonies, through the Crown Agents, have the advantage of obtaining their supplies under "a well-organised and competitive system, and all the benefits which usually accrue from large dealings, high standing and long experience, are enjoyed by the Colonies at a very trifling cost compared with that which they would have to pay to a private agency working for a profit." This is interesting, as showing the good intentions of the Colonial Office, but what they may have intended, and what has been the actual experience of the Colonies which have compelled them to do their business through the Crown Agents are two very different things. It is simply ridiculous to say the system is a competitive one. It may be in theory, but it certainly is not in practice. The Colonial Office knows very well that Hongkong, or any other Colony, could not act independently of the Crown Agents, who are, to all intents and purposes, privileged monopolists. They are not, as the Surveyor-General at Hongkong stated in Committee, salaried from the Crown. They do their business on commission, as a private firm would, with this difference, that the Government finds their clients who are compelled to hand over their business to them, whether the terms and rates are satisfactory or not. The argument that the considerable volume of business done by the Crown Agents for a large number of Colonies enables them to get the very best goods at the very lowest prices sounds plausible enough, and for all we know it may be so; but the point is at the present time that the Colonies have no option in the matter. It may be that Hongkong gets its financial and agency business done as cheaply, or even cheaper, through the Crown Agents as it could elsewhere. They may perfectly understand their business, and do it well; but they do not, the principle on which they have the work is a wrong one, and opposed to the spirit of the times. It is quite time, at any rate, that some investigation should be made into the status and working of this institution, and of its relations to the Colonial Office. At the present time the position of the Crown Agents is altogether anomalous. The system is as unfair to the Colonies as it is to the banking interests of this country, and it is to be hoped that a Parliamentary inquiry into the whole subject will be instituted.

Intimations.

THE FUNDS OF THE STANDARD LIFE OFFICE

ARE invested entirely within the British Dominions and are thus free from the complications which might arise in time of war. They now amount to Six and three-quarter Millions Sterling, and are increasing yearly. A marked preference continues to be shown for STANDARD POLICIES, and every year since 1865, New Assurances for upwards of £1,000,000 have been placed on the books, a result continued uninterruptedly for so long a period by no other British Office.
